

A work of art. Elite.

Crazy cool. Game changer. These are all phrases Jim Rourke set out to define his vision: A golf tool that inspires a “wow” literally every time someone sees it or hears you use it. Jim Rourke, President of Stiletto Golf, began this journey more than ten years ago. Finally, late last year, he succeeded with an heirloom-quality Stiletto-switchblade action ball mark repair tool that looks and feels like nothing else. Plus, it has the unmistakable signature Stiletto switchblade sound. This distinctive double click is right out of a Hollywood knife fight. Although side-swinging switchblades have existed for years and are very common, they have to be manually folded and can be accidentally triggered in your pocket. The Stiletto is fully automatic firing and retracting out of the front of the tool, and it is impossible to open accidentally. Again, it looks and sounds like nothing else. It is definitely an attention-getter on the course.

Jim Rourke spent a great deal of his adult life in the Air Force as a ROMAD – a Special Ops operative functioning as a Liaison to the Army. He coordinated and controlled close-air support and was part of the Rapid Deployment Force on call for any problems throughout the world. After retirement, he caught the inventor/ entrepreneurial bug. Jim comments, “One day I was watching a movie with my son, and the bad guy about to start a gang fight fires a switchblade knife with that intimidating distinctive sound, and I just couldn’t get this idea out of my head. I thought if I could actually make this work in a golf repair tool, it would be a product that could bring a paradigm shift to a very standard golf product.” In 2008 Mr. Rourke patented the action in the Stiletto Green Tool and started a company in December 2008.

Jim adds, “The problems with developing a 100% reliable and extremely high quality production model was an incredible challenge. The compact size was the problem along with its complexity. I ultimately wanted a tool for the discriminating golfer who wants to own the best of everything. Give them fine wood and other exclusive handle materials, a clean stylish design and last-forever quality like a really fine knife. I certainly didn’t think it would take another 13 years. I am so proud of this tool.” Jim said with a chuckle, “My favorite part is being on the green when I push the button. That sound is unmistakable and immediately turns heads. The subsequent wows and comments make this entire journey worthwhile. Even the original version in plastic got “Wows” from Hall of fame golfers. I’m very excited to see the golfers respond to the Stiletto.” It really has been an epic journey for Mr. Rourke. There were design improvements and countless prototypes made. Slowly but surely, Jim kept plugging away. Last year, some very clever design changes made this high quality tool feasible. With the pandemic issues behind him and a final design in hand, he had the prototypes made. When they finally arrived, they were perfect and exactly what he always wanted.

I have known Jim for more than 10 years. I had an original plastic Stiletto, but after seeing the new version and holding it in my hand, I can say it is definitely next level! He is looking at a very high-end consumer, so he spared no expense on construction and materials to make certain you can feel the weight and quality immediately. It is really impressive to say the least. The Stiletto will initially be available in natural wood and anodized aluminum. Soon though, he promises to offer handles in various fine woods and even exotic custom materials. All of them will offer the option of corporate logos on the tool itself and ball markers. Stiletto Golf will also be offering the tool in a beautiful executive gift box.

OK... If you’re someone who always wants the best of everything, I can personally promise you this... There is a Stiletto in your future!

A Work Of Art...

The STILETTO Switchblade

For the first time ever, the words elegance, class and style is used to describe a golf tool. The “Stiletto-knife Action” repair tool is the most exquisitely crafted mechanical marvel in golf. It magically ejects then retracts automatically with a simple push of a button. It is as cool as it gets, but our clever stiletto action is the highest-quality tool ever. It is the golf accessory you will carry for years and always be proud to own.
